The proportion of students who, on their own initiative, temporarily suspend or discontinue their studies before the expected completion date

Indicator Description

During the academic year, the University monitors and analyses the number of students who, on their own initiative and before the expected completion date of their studies, decide to change the course of their studies, including temporarily suspending or permanently discontinuing their studies at the University.

The KPI is assessed in relation to the total number of students in the respective academic year. The University considers an acceptable level to be one where the proportion of such students does not exceed 20% of the total student population.

In addition to the overall indicator, the University conducts an in-depth analysis by study programme and by the reasons provided by students for suspending or discontinuing their studies. This analysis is used to identify trends, study programmes requiring particular attention, and potential measures to improve student retention.

Target:

The proportion of students who have discontinued or suspended their studies does not exceed

of the total number of students.

Note:

Detailed data are available in the RISEBA annual reports, including breakdowns by study programme and reasons for study suspension or discontinuation. The reports are available upon request.
